

LF35_0039 – Online Questions

1. Where did you grow up and what things did you experience during that time that prepared you for photography?
2. What main factor or event caused you to start working as a photojournalist?
3. Where have you spent the majority of your career in photography?
4. What's your favorite subject to photograph and why?
5. What's been the most disturbing subject you've had to cover?
6. Which image that you've taken has had the greatest impact on your life?
7. Was there a subject you got really fired up about that ended up falling short of expectations?
8. What's been the most significant development in photojournalism over the last three to five years? (other than film to digital conversion)
9. How do you see the introduction of video into DSLR's impacting your area?
10. Have you had a chance to use video on a story yet?
11. As a stills photographer, what was it like to try and put together your first video? What was the experience like?
12. What equipment did you use and how did it work?
13. Any specialized gear that you would recommend to supplement the main camera system?
14. What lessons did you learn that you could tell others who are contemplating using the video capability in their DSLR?
15. Do you think this fusion is something that we will all have to eventually embrace? Why/Why Not?
16. We've got a lot of new devices coming at us designed to deliver content and newspapers as well (iSlate). How do you think THEY will impact, not only the industry, but the fact that it may be another outlet for all this video content as well?
17. You've sometimes spent years pulling together just the kind of content those devices can display. How does spending that much time on a story impact you personally?

18. How does your witnessing some of the world's great tragedies shape your personality? In what ways?
19. With all that time spent overseas, have you had time for a personal life, or has it all been business?
20. Where are you off to next? Anywhere interesting?
21. What else does the world not know about you that is important?